

To whom it may concern:

I would like to express the need for High Speed internet in my home. As someone who takes online courses towards finishing my bachelor's degree, I feel that it is almost impossible to complete any school work on my home computer. The time it takes to pull up my course information makes it more worthwhile for me to either do coursework from friends homes or the local library. I would be more than willing to pay the monthly DSL fee in order to complete my work without interruption from home. I also have the option to work from home, but my company has had to refuse that option due to the lack of high speed internet. My internet connection now will not support the network that my work has.

I also use the internet as a resource for my son's schoolwork with report writing and study guides, as well as to pay all of my personal bills.

I feel that my household would greatly benefit from DSL.

Thank you,
